Police no longer investigating alleged town centre rape

After fully investigating the allegation made by an 18-year-old woman, no offence was found to have taken place

BY NATASHA ADKINS
4:53, 9 OCT 2014 UPDATED 14:55, 9 OCT 2014

Police are no longer investigating an alleged rape in Reading town centre.

Officers were called at 12.40am on Sunday, near Icon House in Merchant’s Place, off Friar Street.
The woman, 18, had left Milk Bar and was walking towards the NCP car park when she was approached by a man.

They walked together to a courtyard near Icon House where she says she was raped.

However, after investigating the allegation, police say no offence was found to have happened.

https://www.getreading.co.uk/news/local-news/police-no-longer-investigating-alleged-7910306